THE CURRENT SITUATION OF THE FOREIGN DIRECT INVESTMENTS IN THE ECONOMY OF UZBEKISTAN

The foreign direct investments (FDI) have become a key source of growth in many transitional economies. Therefore, attracting the FDI into the national economy has become one of the objectives of the investment policy of Uzbekistan. Legal framework and regulation of attracting foreign investments in the Republic of Uzbekistan is based on the acts such as the Law on Foreign Investments, the Law on Investment Activity and the Law on Guarantees and Measures of Protection of the Rights of Foreign Investors" dated 1998. In order to create more favorable conditions for carrying out business activities, as well as to reduce, to simplify and to improve the investment procedures, the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan, Islam Karimov, issued a number of decrees. Namely, the “Decrees on additional measures of stimulation of private foreign direct investments attraction” were signed in 2005 and in 2012, and the “Decree on measures on further radical improvement of business environment and providing more freedom to entrepreneurship” was inked in 2013.

It should be noted that in the early 2000s inflow of FDI into the economy of Uzbekistan was low, and, for example, their accumulated volume in 2004 did not exceed $1 billion. After the implementation of the reforms on the investment policy, the annual volume of foreign investment in Uzbekistan increased from $0.7 billion in 2000 to more than $3 billion in 2014. The share of FDI in foreign investments has increased from 14.4% in 2000 to more than 74% in 2014, amounting to about $2.3 billion. Therefore, the volume of the inflow of FDI has increased by 4.3 times over the past 10 years.

The total amount of attracted investments in the economy of Uzbekistan was about $14.6 billion (23.3% of the gross investment in fixed capital) with the share of foreign investments over 21.2% in 2014. According to the State Committee of the Republic of Uzbekistan on Statistics, in the first 6 months of 2015 the volume of foreign investments increased by 11% and reached $1.5 billion or 21.3% of total investments. Moreover, again in the first 6 month of 2015 the volume of FDI increased by 10.9% reaching $1.2 billion.

However, despite significant progress in attracting foreign investments Uzbekistan is still significantly behind the rest of the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) members regarding the FDI per capita. For instance, in 2014 in Uzbekistan the FDI per capita was $262, while in Turkmenistan the FDI per capita was $596, in Kazakhstan and in Azerbaijan the FDI per capita was $579 and $466 respectively.

Aforementioned figures reflect that the foreign and local investors are still concerned over the interference of the government in investments, and bureaucratic obstacles, which cause significant time and resource losses. Corruption also remains one of the main obstacles. Transparency International’s 2014 Corruption Perception Index ranked Uzbekistan 166 out of 175 countries. In order to deal with these problems, in January 2014 the President Islam Karimov signed several legal amendments providing foreign investors some options of hiring foreign labor and of obtaining multiple entry visas for their international employees, as well as of improving state guaranties for infrastructure contracts and for investment protection.

Moreover, in January 2015 the President instructed the government to reduce the share of state in the number of sectors through implementation of a New Privatization Program. According to the Program, it is planned to liquidate and to privatize about 660 state-owned, low liquidity facilities for some specific amounts of goods and services during the first two years after registration of the enterprise.

The government grants a ten-year immunity to changes in tax legislation to new foreign investors if they invest at least $5 million and provides opportunity to buy state-owned, low-liquidity facilities at zero redemption cost if they make specific investment commitments. Furthermore, foreign investors can receive exemptions from customs duties for some specific amounts of goods and services during the first two years after registration of the enterprise.

Finally, foreign investors carrying out exploration work in the oil and gas sector have a seven-year tax holiday from income taxes from the starting date of extraction. In certain cases, the government could provide foreign companies engaged in exploration and production of oil and gas additional privileges and preferences based on direct negotiations between the competent authority and the strategic investor.

In conclusion, it should be noted that despite the fact that the current tax administration and the new legislation on protecting minority investors have improved, there is still a number of issues to be dealt with to make the system of taxation less complicated and ambiguous.

construction and construction materials (4.7%), road construction (3.6%), drinking water supply and sewers (3.0%), agriculture and water management (1.9%) and others. In these circumstances, it becomes clear that the Uzbek authorities seek to focus on foreign investments that support country’s import substitution and the export-oriented industrial policy.

After the decline of the FDI in 2012, Uzbekistan introduced new investment incentives in its attempt to restore confidence of the foreign businesses. For instance, enterprises with foreign investments operating in specified industries are granted tax holidays for a period of three years if the FDI exceeds $300,000; of five years if it exceeds $3 million; and of seven years if it exceeds $10 million.

Moreover, the Uzbek government grants a ten-year immunity to changes in tax legislation to new foreign investors if they invest at least $5 million and provides opportunity to buy state-owned, low-liquidity facilities at zero redemption cost if they make specific investment commitments. Furthermore, foreign investors can receive exemptions from customs duties for some specific amounts of goods and services during the first two years after registration of the enterprise.

Finally, foreign investors carrying out exploration work in the oil and gas sector have a seven-year tax holiday from income taxes from the starting date of extraction. In certain cases, the government could provide foreign companies engaged in exploration and production of oil and gas additional privileges and preferences based on direct negotiations between the competent authority and the strategic investor.

In conclusion, it should be noted that despite the fact that the current tax administration and the new legislation on protecting minority investors have improved, there is still a number of issues to be dealt with to make the system of taxation less complicated and ambiguous.
