PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS IN UZBEKISTAN

From the end of 2014 to the first half of 2015 Uzbekistan has been in the process of conducting regular electoral campaigns. First round of parliamentary elections to the Legislative Chamber of the Oliy Majlis was held on December 21, 2014. There was also a need for the second round of elections in 22 districts, where none of the candidates received required votes to be elected. So, re-elections to the lower house of Parliament were held on January 4, 2015.

Also, on December 21, 2014 elections were held for the local Kengashes (Councils) of deputies. These elections of Kengashes had great deal of importance for the upper echelons of state power in Uzbekistan because the local councils of deputies could elect 84 over 100 members of the Senate, which was also reformed according to the results of elections held on January 13-14, 2015. The President of the Republic of Uzbekistan, by presidential decree, approved the remaining 16 members of the Senate on January 20, 2015. One of those 16 members, namely Nigmatilla Yuldoshev, former Minister of Justice, was elected as Chairman of the Senate of the Oliy Majlis on January 22, 2015.

Central Election Commission of Uzbekistan has announced that next presidential election of the Republic of Uzbekistan will be held on March 29, 2015. Traditionally, Uzbek parliamentary elections have sufficiently high level of voter turnout, despite the fact that the elections are considered valid if at least 33 percent of people voted in accordance with the Law on “Election to the Oliy Majlis of the Republic of Uzbekistan” (Art. 44).

There are three key features of the elections to the Legislative Chamber of the Oliy Majlis:
- Starting 2009, 15 seats (10%) in the Legislative Chamber are reserved for the Ecological Movement of Uzbekistan (in accordance with the Law “On elections to the Oliy Majlis of the Republic of Uzbekistan”) (Art. 1);
- Candidates to deputies could be nominated only by registered political parties (Art. 20) despite the existence of majoritarian system in single-member districts (Art. 1);
- Percentage of all deputy seats occupied by women should not be less than 30% (Art. 22)

The absence of the dominant party could be called the most important characteristic of the Legislative Chamber of the Oliy Majlis. As none of the political parties could not take more than 50% of the seats in the Legislative Chamber, policy decision-making process is based on establishing alliances and reaching compromises. Obviously, a dominant political party is not a necessary condition for the current political system of Uzbekistan. However, in the medium term perspective Uzbekistan will strengthen the implementation of the policy of governmental system changing, held since 2010, towards the presidential-parliamentary form.

In general, the main trends of the parliamentary election campaigns held between 2004-2015 are as follows:
- Steady weakening of the People's Democratic Party positions and strengthening positions of the Democratic Party “Milliy Tiklanish”;
- Appearing to be a new leader among political parties, the Liberal Democratic Party for the period between 2004-2014 has strengthen its role in the Uzbekistan party system and usually holds the largest number of seats in the Legislative Chamber;
- Significant increasing role of the Ecological Movement of Uzbekistan (EMU) for the period between 2010-2014. After creating wide network of representations at both local and national levels, EMU initiated a number of projects, which have been supported by the government and the whole society.

Since 2000 Uzbekistan’s government scrutinizes the results of the parliamentary elections in order to make clear which party is able to conduct the election campaign more effectively. It has become a normal practice that Islam Karimov is nominated as a candidate for presidential elections on behalf of the political party which could take the most seats in Parliament. For example, in 1999 Karimov was nominated as candidate of the National Democratic Party “Fidokorlar”, which held 13.77% percent of all seats in the Oliy Majlis. But in 2004, The Liberal Democratic Party had the largest number of seats (41 out of 120) and Karimov chose to be this party's candidate for the presidency during the elections in 2007.

According to the statistical data, the Liberal Democratic Party has taken the largest number of seats (52 out of 150) during last parliamentary elections. So, it was already announced that Karimov was registered as a candidate of this party for the presidential elections in 2015.
